

It Is Right Before Our Eyes! By Kathie Brodie
November 2008

Once again I am going through a phase of change. I keep waking up at 4:20, so by 5:00 or 5:30 I usually give up and just get up. So yesterday morning I was up at oh-dark-thirty, out on the deck breathing in clean fresh air, and then I actually came inside and watched a DVD on orbs. It was fascinating! Suddenly I thought why don't I try taking some pictures in the dark as they suggest and see what happens? So I found my camera and stood out on the deck and took probably 20 pictures. Then I came back inside and watched more of the DVD. Then it occurred to me to take some interior pictures. All I did was set my intention to see orbs and snap some pictures of places around the house, and I ended up in the corner that feels best to me.

After the DVD was finished I looked at the digital pictures with great anticipation. The first one: nothing. The second one: nothing. More and more, and again, nothing. Double dog darn! I really wanted to see orbs! A friend of mine was working in Eastern Washington in a theatre and she took pictures filled with orbs. She had the bright idea to tell them to line up and the next frame had the orbs in an "H" shape, which is the first letter of her name!!! So why can't I do that? I have been feeling more in touch with my gifts lately, more accepting of what I am doing and where I am going on my energy path, so what's the deal? Universe has been shaking up my world more than usual lately and I have changed the way I look at a lot of things. How much more do I need to do? So I stopped feeling sorry of myself, decided I would continue to trust and have faith that universe would not abandon me, that I am doing the right thing, yada yada yada, and looked at the last few pictures in the group that I had taken inside the house in my favorite corner, and there they were! Orbs! There was a clear round one which I hope you can see in this picture, and there were rectangular and round ones in a different picture. Wow! After all the pictures I have taken and no orbs, all I can figure is that when I actually asked to see the orbs and opened myself up to accepting whether they appeared or not, coupled with the information that they are all around, voila, they appeared!

So much of what we are waiting for to happen or to see or to accept is right before our eyes. We think it has to be hard, to be a struggle. No, it doesn't. The orbs are there, waiting. We signed up to have the experiences and we forgot what it was like before we picked a human form. The veil is thinning, we are remembering, the orbs are there. Go for it! Be open to it. Accept.
